Mission Cooperative Diocese of Minna, Nigeria

The Catholic Diocese of Minna is a mission Diocese located in Niger State, North Central, Nigeria. They are a minority amongst a predominantly Muslim population. Today it has a Catholic population of approximately 97,525. The Diocese ministers mostly to poor rural people whose average daily wage is less than $1.25. The Diocese has a pastoral commitment to the rural poor who survive with scarce resources, and often in deplorable social conditions. This provides them with the opportunity to invest in the work of social justice, advocacy, community and human development. Through the Mission Cooperation Plan and collaboration efforts, they are able to provide primary health care clinics in remote villages to reduce infant mortality rates and to boost antenatal and early childhood care. In addition, they provide civic education to the marginalized rural poor, build schools in poorer communities, and improve sanitary conditions through the provision of drinking water to prevent cholera and other diseases. This way they help reduce the burden of traveling for miles to obtain clean water.

Fr. Kizito Okhuoya from the Office of Missions related his personal experience: "Talking about Clean water, an encounter with a little kid in a poor rural school stands out. It was a sunny day and I joined the kids to play soccer. There were probably over thirty kids playing. Conscious of the humidity and heat, and the need for hydration, I approached one of the kids and encouraged him to stop and take a drink, but the kid said to me in the local dialect, I can only drink as much because I have to reserve some for the long trek back home after school hours. Many of the kids walk several miles daily to come to the school. The kid's reply left me with a life-time lesson of the things I take for granted. Today, the school has a clean and functional well built through some of the proceeds from the Missionary Cooperation Plan." Thank you for your generosity.
